

Benefits of desexing your pet

For the boys it can reduce their tendency to become aggressive and their urge to go roaming for a mate. It can reduce their risk of prostatic infection and help with their trainability, as well as ensuring they have no risk of testicular cancer.

For the girls it will stop them from coming into season and attracting unwelcome attention from the boys and from ever having ovarian and uterine cancers. If they are desexed before their first season it can minimise the risk of breast cancer. Desexing can also help with their trainability and make them happier members of your family.
